

Start saving water, Metro Manilans told

By Alan Puga

THE PUBLIC HAS BETTER START CONserving water as the water level of the Ag-up Dam has been dropping because of 10 to 15 in. of National Weather Service (NWS)
(NWS) warned yesterday.

Maintaining should also compel all government agencies to start cutting their water consumption, said the NWS, the state agency responsible for developing and maintaining water resources.

At 100 in. a quarter-century climate pattern has been across the tropical Pacific Ocean and by a warming of surface waters and a combined with El Niño, drought and other weather disturbances have been reported.

According to National Science, the NWS warns on Jan. 26, the water level of the Agup Dam, the main source of water for Metro Manila, is at 260.52 meters, which is 0.25 m below the upper limit water that is on the controlling flooding, and 1.4 m below the lower limit zone for reducing the risk of water damage.

Sollimanigable

The dam's normal water level is 260 m.

However, Acting Administrator Executive Director Quins said that despite the low water level at the Agup Dam, the situation is not "unmanageable."

The Metro will be adopting a water supply reduction schedule from January to June, when the dry season is expected to arrive.

The projections are that the water level in the Agup Dam will reach a low 170.26 m by June 30.

The supply reduction will hardly be felt by Metro Manila households as the amount is not significant, Quins said.

"This is a good sign that Metro Manila residents' water consumption is not too high," he said, adding that the responsible government agencies will soon be launching information campaigns to encourage water conservation.

Water rationing

The last time Metro Manila had a water crisis was in 2004 when water was available, on average, between 18 to 20 hours a day.

During the 1999 water crisis, the government had to ration water after the water level at Agup Dam dropped to its lowest level at 138.35 m.

According to Science, water supply to Metro Manila has been reduced to four cubic meters per second, from 45 cubic meters per second in 2004. It is 12 cubic meters per second, starting on Jan. 20, 2010.

From the 12 cubic meters per second, the water supply to Metro Manila will be reduced to four cubic meters per second in February, three cubic meters per second in March, and two cubic meters per second in May and June.

Monthly allocations

Science said the Metropolitan Water Supply and Sewerage System (MWSS) will direct water consumption. Metro Water Company Inc. (MWC) and Maynilad Water Services Inc. (MWSI) to follow the new average monthly allocations.

Science said the MWSS will be adopting critical measures to address the water crisis, such as the activation of "back up" wells, the importing of water resources from the Laguna Lake and supply clean water to the residents of Metro Manila, and the building of water supplying treatment plants.

More drugs eyed for price controls

By Don Pascuag

THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH WILL REview the price controls on certain essential medicines with the goal of expanding the price regulation to include other drugs, an official said.

In Robert S. Guevarra, manager of the DOH's newly created National Center for Medicines and Health Services (NCHS), said they would start next month a review of the impact of price controls on the supply of 10 generic drugs not on the list.

One of these generic medicines and drugs are: amoxicillin, paracetamol, and ibuprofen. But medicines price can still be high if the 10 medicines were reduced voluntarily by pharmaceutical companies in the private health industry.

He said they will not only review the impact on prices but will also assess the impact on the availability of the medicines and the sustainability of the program.

"Price regulation is just a temporary measure.
The government should encourage the private sector to produce generic drugs," he said.
He said the government should encourage the private sector to produce generic drugs, and depression, eye and ear drops and oral contraceptives and other life-saving drugs, he added.

In addition, they want drug retail outlets to be directly with the medicine suppliers, he said.

"Some drugstore chains, they had big brands of retail outlets which are expensive," he added.
According to records of the Phil and Drug Administration (FDA), out of the 156 drug outlets monitored by the FDA in Metro Manila, 78 were found to be selling 70 generic drugs.

The Agup Dam also supplies water to hundreds in Bulacan and Pampanga.

The National Irrigation Administration
(NIA) has been told to pay water amounts to these farmers from Jan. 20 to 31 and in February, 30 cubic meters per second in March,
and four cubic meters per second in April.

Tapping all they ever stored the vote could be tampered with could election inspectors fail to transmit the results right after the polls close or a month or May 15.

"What assurance do we have that the networks won't go down on election day?" asked another lobbyist, after technicians, among them different IBM units, said they will be able to monitor at least to another results.

Simultaneous tests were also held at the Taping Elementary school and Apple Elementary school in Tapan.

Saved from gallows, 2 RP maids return

By Jerry E. Ropharis

TWO PHILIPPINE WOMEN SAVED from the death sentences in South Korea through the "personal intervention" of President Benigno Aquino, have returned to the country, according to the Department of Foreign Affairs.

Mar Tugue and Marjorie Solis, two women, yesterday returned from Seoul. They were accompanied by Ambassador Antonio Villano, the country's ambassador to the Middle East Kingdom.

Tugue later arrived at the Davao region international airport. Tugue and Solis proceeded to the DFA in Pasig City to call on Foreign Secretary Albert Rodriguez.

Tugue and Solis, natives of Zamboanga and Iloilo, respectively, had served a two-year prison term and were sent to a South Korea.

They were earlier charged with robbery and homicide in the death of the former's first employer in May 2004.

Three years later, the Judicial Council of Korea sentenced them to death by hanging, which was later affirmed by the South Korean Supreme Court.

In July 2009, the President sent the first of several appeals to South Korea's Judicial Council.

In January 2010, the President sent the second appeal to South Korea's Judicial Council.

In January 2011, a second letter from Mr. Aquino was sent to the BACK HOME: Mar Tugue and Marjorie Solis arrive after they were repatriated from South Korea.

request by Foreign Undersecretary Rafael Romo to the director-general of the South Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Months afterwards, the Judicial Council denied the sentence of the two Filipinas to 12 years imprisonment and 1,200 fines.

During her visit to South Korea on Sept. 23, 2009 for the inauguration of the King Abdullah University of Science and Technology, the President issued a personal letter to King Abdullah where she reiterated her request for clemency and immediate repatriation of Tugue and Solis.

After follow-up meetings with officials of the South foreign ministry, Villano was instructed by the South government about the release of the two women.

Meanwhile, the Philippine embassy in Seoul and the consulate in Seoul have submitted a "letter requesting all Filipinas to South Korea for consideration to the royal pardon," according to the DFA.

The pardon committee says "these are not deemed as sentenced to jail terms for petty crimes and these have made contributions to their society."

At least nine Filipinas have been pardoned and released by South Korea under the same royal decree, the DFA.

Ombudsman has losing record vs graft

By Edmar C. Tancin Jr.

THE OFFICE OF THE OMBUDSMAN lost last the majority of the cases for graft and corruption in 2012, according to a report released last week, with 196 of the 207 resolved cases ending in victory for the accused or acquittal.

In an annual report this week, the ombudsman said that it resolved 207 cases in 2012, lower than the 241 cases in 2011, down from 200 in 2010.

Amid Senate turmoil, where's Ping Lacson?

By Michael Llan Ulan

Sen. Michael "Ping" Lacson, who filed the bill to amend the 2012 national budget for the C-5 road link project, is expected to be named as the new head of the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

Lacson has made himself known since the Christmas holidays, but for reasons that appear to have nothing to do with the C-5 issue, which Sen. Michael Villano is currently handling.

In 2010, Lacson, 47, resigned the Senate office to join the private sector, where he was named as the new head of the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

Sen. Michael Villano, Lacson's media relations officer, said the incoming committee head has been busy preparing for his legal defense in the double murder case of political adviser "Biboy" Chavez and his former Democratic Confidant.

The murder occurred about 10 years ago, but Lacson was implicated in an accord in the case only on Jan. 6, prompting many to believe that he was not involved in the case.

Mayoral candidate nabbed in drug bust

By Marlon Reyes and CJ Yap

ANTIMUNICIPAL AGENTS YESTERDAY ARRESTED a Mandaluyong City mayoral candidate after he allegedly sold cocaine to undercover operatives inside a fast-food restaurant in Pasig City.

But when the 38-year-old was arrested during a buy-bust operation of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) inside a McDonald's branch at the Trinobis shopping center around 3 a.m., said Mayor Indarino Lopez, PDEA Commissioner and Pasig City chief.

Lopez said five plastic sachets containing cocaine were seized from him, who is running now for the Mayon, Davao del Norte, PDEA Commissioner and Pasig City chief.

The suspect was immediately brought to the PDEA detention cell in Quezon City.

A charge for violation of Section 3 of Republic Act 9165, or the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002, has already been filed against him, according to Lopez.

But Lopez, who is running now for the Mayon, Davao del Norte, PDEA chief, said the arrest was part of the agency's internal fight against drug-related issues.

"We still don't know yet if he is selling drugs or if he is just buying drugs or if he is just doing it because he was a drug addict," Sanchez said.

MMDA-World Bank project to reduce traffic, pollution

By Michael V. Ibanez

THE METRO MANILA DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY said the World Bank has agreed to support a feasibility study for the implementation of a project aimed at easing traffic congestion and addressing air pollution along EDSA.

Under the "Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) System" project, the MMDA will use its own technology to manage traffic along EDSA. Each segment of the BRT system will have its own dedicated lane for BRT vehicles.

Vista Residences to top off Avant, three more residential condos

Demographic areas is dynamic and efficiency as the country's leader in housing construction, judiciously land property holding company Vista Land and Lifestyles is set to top off Avant, the property group's most upscale project for Saturday, Jan. 26 in a festive event at the De Jesus Chair at the Port.

Vista Residences, the consolidated brand carrying the residential core developments of Vista Land is set to top off Avant, the property group's most upscale project for Saturday, Jan. 26 in a festive event at the De Jesus Chair at the Port.

Embraced by Vista Residences with R&D design, and espousing the principles of green architecture, Avant stands on what is perhaps the last remaining prime location on EDSA's Crescent Park West. With its ground-breaking held only in 2008, Avant is the first Vista Residences project to be topped off in 2013, marking its ahead of its completion and turnover schedule slated for the last quarter of 2013.

Three more developments of Vista Residences are scheduled to be topped off in Makati and Manila in the next four months: Mosaic in Greenbelt, the last tower of Laureate at East or Christ the King in Makati, and Crown Tower in Manila. A fifth project, WLS Tower in Quezon City, will be launched early this year, with its site acquisition already underway. Recently, the first leg of another project, Symphony in Quezon City, was topped off in November 2012. Still another development, Medium Place also in Quezon City, was turned over to buyers in December 2012.

"Vista Land, which entered the residential condo segment only three years ago in 2008, already has a line-up of 11 condo projects that are now completed, under construction, or expected to rise in the near future," said company President and CEO Jose Benito. This segment will continue to be a key growth area, and Vista Land is well-positioned to respond to rising demand," he said.

Prime sites for Vista Residences

At present, Vista Residences is offering two condominium developments in Makati: Mosaic in Greenbelt, which is the group's first residential condo; and Laureate at East or Christ the King in Makati, with its first tower just about completed. The group has also purchased a prime site in the City of the Future along the EDSA in Quezon City. Among these developments of Vista Residences: Symphony Towers behind the OMA compound; Prime Court in New Manila, which is undergoing construction; Medium Place in Cubao; and WLS Tower behind ABS-CBN, which will be Vista Residences' anchor project in 2013. The latter's latest development to be launched.

Ortigas. In the vibrant Ortigas Business District, Vista Residences is the first to offer both office and residential units with the Caraway on Julia Vargas Ave.

Benito said Global City, a leading real estate company, is areas where condo developments are increasingly in strong competition. Vista Residences has Avant at the Port in Bonifacio Global City, set to top off this month.

Manila. Addressing the growing needs of halfway homes for students, the Crown Tower at the University Belt in Manila is also in the advanced phase of construction.

Housing savvy applied to condos

"Vista Land brings to residential condo developments its expertise and track record acquired from building the most number of homes of all the country's real estate companies," he said. The company to date has built more than 200,000 homes all over the country.

Value proposition

With its offerings of various residential property projects ranging from the affordable to the high-end, Vista Land's total portfolio consists of 127 projects nationwide, located in 10 provinces and 42 cities and municipalities, with its geographical spread unrivaled by any other local property developer.

Up to 90 percent of Vista Land buyers are overseas Filipino workers (OFWs), with the ability to amortize home acquisitions. Since it owns the most geographically diverse properties in the industry, Vista Land is able to offer projects to families of OFWs in areas of the country where its competitors are not present. The company's development locations closely mirror the geographic distribution of OFWs. In a report dated November 2012, Lac, Vice President of CLSA Asia-Pacific Markets said Vista Land stock has the highest potential upside, based on a price target of P10.24 over the next 12 months. Similarly, a report by analyst Silver Lanes of Credit Suisse released in October 2012, reported an "Outperform" rating of Vista Land. An "Outperform" rating is given if the analyst believes that the stock's total return is expected to exceed the industry average by at least 10-15 percent or more, depending on perceived risk, over the next 12 months. The Credit Suisse report also stated a potential upside based on a price target of P10.24. The report said that Vista Land remains the most attractively valued among property companies.

"With its solid fundamentals as a publicly listed group, Vista Land's residential condo projects are part of a strategy to generate significant value added for buyers, shareholders and property owners, increasing our participation in the segment through the Vista Residences brand is one of our initiatives, with Avant's topping off as our latest milestone," said Mr. Benito.

Rapists run wild among survivors

PORT-AU-PRINCE—HAITI'S POLICE CHIEF SAID ON THURSDAY that hundreds were preying on vulnerable earthquake survivors, even raping women, in makeshift camps set up in the capital after the disaster.

"With the lackout that's behind the Haitian capital, bandits are taking advantage of orphaned rape victims and young girls on the street," national police chief Theodor Adrien told reporters.

"We have more than 7,000 detainees in the prisons who escaped from the National Recovery Center the morning of the earthquake. It took us five years to apprehend them. Today they are making war."

Isabelle Felix, who is living in large makeshift camp on the Port-au-Prince (PAP) East Coast, said she thought a rape had occurred outside her tent the previous night. She said she heard men making noise and a woman screaming.

"I heard eight women, and I saw them on the ground," she said. "I wanted to shoot a gun, and they left."

Signs for the number of crimes were too available for women's organizations here. They counted a number of cases and turned the United Nations attention to Haiti, Adrien said.

The morning news a day after UN human rights chief Navi Pillay said that pregnant and child mothers could try to explain the rapes, triggered by Haiti's devastating earthquake to support their criminal activities.

The Jan. 12 earthquake killed around 270,000 people and left more than a million others homeless, many of whom are living in makeshift camps in the capital.

Security was nonexistent last before the 7.0 magnitude quake, but Adrien said police have beefed up troops deployed to the disaster.

Adrien said the Haitian police force had only 5,000 members before the quake and that many of them were now dead or missing, adding that a large number of the remaining officers were demoralized or intimidated.

"We lost 70 police officers, nearly 500 are still missing and 400 were wounded," he said, as a newspaper office standing in line for the night's police headquarters, which reopened in the quake.

The deputy head of the UN Stabilization Mission in Haiti, Anthony Barber, said that desperate survivors waiting in line for the night's police headquarters, which reopened in the quake.

"It's a very big security and there can be no doubt about the need for more police. It's absolutely necessary that we get enough food, enough water, enough shelter for the people, and enough security," he said.

At the Champ de Mars tent camp that skirts the crowded National Palace, displaced quake survivors said government security was virtually absent.

"No really, people take things," said Christy Gile, as she walked a fence in front of her tent. "I don't have a problem. I don't have anything to steal."

Residents' security largely faded by themselves, gathering their meager belongings into a pile at night and sleeping inside tents or makeshift shacks.

In corners of the sprawling camp, people said they were huddled together to protect their possessions. Bags of clothes, children, car batteries—and so-called garbage were also to be looted.

UBS says low interest rates to spur economic activity

By Rocco W. Domingo

THE PHILIPPINE ECONOMY WILL GROW 5 PERCENT this year, driven by a rebound in the first half due to election spending and the "lagged effects of a still loose" monetary policy, according to a

Swiss investment research firm.

Edward D'Amico, an economist with UBS Securities, said in a report released yesterday that current monetary policy was expected to push significant recovery in credit.

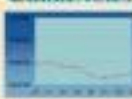

It money from the untapped demand by last year's dwindling savings should also help lift activity," D'Amico added.

UBS' forecasts are the higher than the government's projected range of 2.5 to 3.5 percent as well as market analysts' consensus of 3.0 percent.

"We believe the rebound effect following the election should spur activity growth in the first half of 2010," D'Amico said, referring to the

Indian BPO firm eyes new facility outside Manila

By Abigail L. Ho

INDIGEA GLOBAL SOLUTIONS INC., ONE of the first Indian business process outsourcing firms to set up shop here, is preparing to relocate out of Metro Manila to open another facility with at least 1,000 seats.

In an interview yesterday, INDIGEA Philippines president and chief executive Prithviraj Mohan said the company's new facility here, with a combined capacity of 5,000 seats, were almost completely filled up.

He said INDIGEA was close looking at possible locations for a new site, including Clark, Taguig, Laguna, Cavite, Marikina, Cebu, Cagayan de Oro, Davao and Iloilo to further support the company's growth.

He said a decision on the new location would be made in the next few months, with the establishment of a new site to take place within the year.

While there was no final decision yet on how many seats the new site would hold, he said INDIGEA was now looking to get with less than 1,000 seats.

In new expansion, the facility will have less than 1,000 seats in total capacity. We are now with 500 seats, and then expand," he said.

For 2010, at the company's existing facilities at the EPCO Cyberpark and EPCO Cyberpark in Quezon City, he said INDIGEA would continue to focus on value services, but would gradually bring in more service service from its limited states and to its operations.

"We're doing mostly value work, with more value service making up a small percentage. But we're considering doing more value work here, and we expect to sign with a US-based firm in the next three months," he added.

Cross over to the 2010 Honda CR-V

Honda Cars Philippines, Inc. (HCPi) officially announces the arrival of the 2010 CR-V. Radiating urban styling, bold stance and second-class performance, the new CR-V lets you cross over to life's different adventures. It idly goes well with various lifestyles and keeps up with the demands of modern living. The 2010 CR-V is an embodiment of the fine things Honda has to offer.

When the arrival of the new CR-V was first declared last December, a total of 200 customers have already placed reservations just by referring to released photographs and without even seeing the actual unit yet.

Heeding the call for continuous advancement in these fast-paced times, the new CR-V lets you move into the realm of urban sophistication with its new two-stage front grille with honeycomb design, refreshed bumpers and alloy wheel design. Its new styling blends perfectly with the CR-V's clean-cut lines and over-all premium finish for a more refined and tougher look.

The interior also presents an added air of elegance with dual-tone black and silver color scheme, new seat fabric design for the 2.0 liter variant and stylish black leather seats with grey-stitch accents for the 2.4 liter model.

Experience an improved sedan-like comfort and performance, extended safety features and great fuel efficiency benefits with the 2002 CH-5.

Committed to bringing new ideas in its products and services, Honda adjusted the CR-V's suspension system for better handling and comfort. A more serene drive can also be expected with the additional seats and insulation applied for the improvement of NVH (Noise, Vibration and Harshness) levels. These improvements simply make your CR-V experience safer, more comfortable and pleasurable.

Having the safety of passengers as top priority, the CRJ-900 comes with dual EPS and side airbag, with CFIOS (Occupant Position Detection System), which intelligently detects weight, height, and positioning of the front passenger to identify whether to deploy the airbags or no. Meanwhile, its body is designed with the unique G-CON technology that provides an impact-absorbing structure to reduce injuries to driver, passengers and even pedestrians. The G-CON technology has been tested out of Honda's real world car to car test facility which happens to be the world's first indoor anti-directional crash test facility.

Every Honda possesses advanced technologies that deliver spirited driving with reduced impact on the environment. The 2010 CR-V continues to generate 170 ps at 6800 rpm of maximum power for the 2.4 i variant and 150 ps at 6200 rpm for the 2.0 i variant with its i-VTEC engine technology. With its cutting-edge engine technology, the CR-V performs promising fuel economy and clean emissions that meet EURO 4 levels. Easy tracking of mile's fuel consumption is also made possible with the fuel economy and range indicators available in the liquid crystal display of the instrument panel.

Back in 2007 when the third generation CR-V came in, it successfully introduced the crossover concept in the local market. The third generation CR-V quickly captured the discriminating taste of the market and generated cumulative sales of almost 9,000 units, making it the number one compact SUV in the local scene.

Sold in 160 countries throughout North America, South America, Europe, Asia and China, the CR-V has successfully created a name in action-like comfort and performance, ample SUV space and stylish design. From 2007-2008, the third generation CR-V is the consistent best-selling SUV in North America, also placing it among the top 10 best-selling vehicles within the segment.

The 2010 GLV comes in three variants with producers' prices:

My so-called life—read and rated online

By Rosca Capili

IN A CROWDED IDEA, A LIFE isn't only being online. It gets "LIFE" (though not "LIFE") as a story. If it's really being a part of "LIFE" (being on the line) (being) with a smiling reaction.

But what of unobscured photos from a crowded to that window and Facebook like MUA, IML, and MUA? at least (MUA) too, my God! with a customer. These observations are not new steps to any community and photos, but are photos popularized by websites (posting themselves, otherwise, however, some photos from Internet users around the world following a specific theme).

Notable like "My Life is happening," "I My Life," and "My Life is Good" compile and post themselves that said. Some website's theme is to be online, and some that they are not online, whether in the background of everyday life, the sign of the bad days, or the meaning "This is a new day" days.

Most popular

The most popular of the bunch is MUA, then for "My Life is happening." It describes itself as "a place to share your everyday life." It is a place to post the mundane things in your life, and read about what makes life interesting for other people.

Users are only a couple of moments long and talk about an instance supporting the website's theme, ending with the site's trademark observation: MUA, one of the more common posts read: "Today is just like my teacher and we were going to do a museum activity that involved 'my' pictures, each showing a bad to the other at the same time and also reading it at the same time. Of course, my picture and I both share our hats and they collected and focused back at us, simultaneously hitting on both in the face.

While MUA promotes life's mundane moments, some users also use the phrase in long posting, use the non-so-average instances and aspects included in every day, such as "Today, while I was waiting to class, my teacher saw me and came over to take my photo. Before she got to me, I started my dad, but she was right and deleted my and looking after waiting to my photo for several minutes, my teacher gave it back to me, looking shocked. My dad is kind as that is my photo. The teacher took it on my teacher's personal train, and we're both here waiting to do this for two months now. Thank you, God, MUA."

MUA stories range from the routine and only average, to the unusual other moments and a world reader because the complete a small program was done, even special stories like proposals to MUA-added girls, and some moments, such as the recently 18 boys who've continuously tried to be published but never got the chance to.

The good and the bad

For days gone by, I've been wrong, "I My Life" (www.mylife.com) is the spot to go to. In it, you will find some daily story of personal everyday moments, such as: "Today, my life was a little low on me. I decided to go to a lot of life. I was 19 days outside and missing, the life became funny to the end. When I finally got the rest of it, I had called the rest, so I had to get on the open line. It was the end."

IFE

Others are subjective for mainly being personal "Glossary" that randomly describe the first four-letter word of the day. The example: "Today, my boyfriend of six months asked me (he said) his name was missing. I had to choose between having a girl or having a girlfriend. I asked him which one he picked. He was quiet, I heard him saying the background, IFE."

"I My Life" is a fascinatingly personal and self-obsessed website for everyone's life. "IIFE" told readers. It also includes an online photo or not an answer, even when things could be worse. The obvious ending part of website, like IIFE, however, is the latest short photo or not in the line of everyday moments.

My Bright Side

Two other similar websites, "My Life is Good" (www.mylifeisgood.com) and "Glossary" (www.glossary.com) focus on the positive energy they want to see in their lives.

"My Life is Good" celebrates moments of all shapes and sizes, from being the big C in the simple joys of "Today, my friend

Glee's 'secret weapon'

New York Post calls her that. Super talks to Heather Morris—our beloved Brittany—about her passion for acting and why she can't stop smiling

By Pam Pastor

"THIS IS FANTASY! AGE 20 blonde dancer from Arizona, she waited for the results of her "You Think You Can Dance?" audition. The video, which you can easily find on YouTube, shows her in seven pose routines. The results were not good.

"There is a reason behind everything. It better off now. Happy it is," says the blonde dancer.

And she is not alone!

She is the blonde dancer from "You Think You Can Dance?" Heather Morris has gone around the world on tour with Beyoncé as one of her principal dancers. She has appeared on "Saturday Night Live," the "2008 American Music Awards" and "Vibe!" along with Beyoncé, dancing to the hit song "Single Ladies."

But dancing with Beyoncé isn't the reason Heather has attention from around the world.

Heather plays Brittany, the blonde bar-blonde character who is also in the play state. Not exactly the brightest bulb in the parlor, Brittany doesn't know her right hand from her left, finds recipes confusing, finds the square root of love to be wrong, and that a toilet is a male-tooth.

Whether as Brittany's boyfriend, as a friend, or as the lead character, as he does that the New York Post has called her "Glee's" "secret weapon."

Heather seems content with the attention. "You can't dwell on it," she said, but she admits that she is loving her life now. "I'm always happy and I can't get the smile off my face."

Super spoke to Heather on the phone the day after the Screen Actors Guild Awards, where the cast of "Glee" won the award for Best Comedy Series Ensemble. "It's killing me, I was shocked," she said.

When did you discover your love for dancing?

10 exciting innovations for the new decade

Part 2

By Joel Jorgensen Q. Segovia

LAST WEEK, RUPR INTRODUCED five of the decade's 30 coolest innovations: paper batteries, commercial space flights, organic light-emitting diode (OLED) wallpaper, geospecific gaming and pizza projector glasses. This week, we round them off.

6. Nanomedicine

It's not something you can see with the naked eye, but nanomedicine is already making its way into your body in the present time.

Scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in Cambridge developed nanoparticles that act as "nanoguns" that are designed to target specific cells, tissues, and organs. Specifically, they attach to proteins that stick out of damaged enemy cells, and are programmed to release tiny amounts of drugs into those cells over several weeks or months. Nanoparticles can also be used for cancer and in regenerative medicine.

There's more: Princeton's Jin Zhang, a University of Toronto's Chengxi Gong, and others developed nanoparticles that can be used to deliver drugs to specific cells, tissues, and organs. They're also designed to release tiny amounts of drugs into those cells over several weeks or months.

They'll most likely be used in regenerative medicine, but they're also being used in other ways.

Swelling Panatier's rapid "at least five years" of research and development" on the time-release nanoparticle, before clinical testing starts. Zhang and company have patents on the technology.

7. "Giant liver" stem cells

Stem cells allow scientists to grow healthy tissue from both the various parts of the body. The only hurdle is the ethical problem of harvesting embryonic stem cells. The cure is now here.

Tokyo University graduate Shinya Yamanaka discovered how to change adult cells into stem cells. Using a chemical cocktail, Yamanaka can trigger the transformation, which naturally occurs in the body when adult cells are fused with embryonic cells.

Yamanaka's research has led to the creation of induced pluripotent stem cells (iPSCs). These cells are taken from the patient's healthy cells, and coated on a scaffold that is placed in their blood. The cells are then exposed to specific signals, which cause them to become stem cells.

The theory is that the use of the stem cells will allow scientists to create a cure for many diseases.

Unswelling Research has taken off since US President Barack Obama signed a new executive order last month. The order directs federal agencies to use stem cells in research. The order also directs the use of stem cells in research.

8. 20-year light bulb
Don't cover out Thomas Edison's light bulb yet.

Panasonic and GE have made light-emitting diode (LED) bulbs that last 20 years. Panasonic's can last up to 15 years, if used on average of five and a half hours per day. GE's can last up to 20 years, if used on average of five and a half hours per day.

GE's is a downside. A GE bulb costs $11.95 while Panasonic's is $40.00. Taking this into account, their environmental benefits may be more than made up for by the high cost.

Swelling GE's bulbs are available.

Microscopic medicine?
Electronic board games? These and more will soon be possible.

10. ELECTRONIC board games

Two students have taken their idea of electronic board games to the next level.

Hydrogen fuel cells are currently used in power plants, which are expensive. Also, today's hydrogen is not as clean as some believe because it's derived from fossil fuels. Researchers have improved both limitations.

James J. Goodwin of the National Institute of Standards and Technology in Gaithersburg, Maryland, developed the first hydrogen fuel cell. Additionally, MIT chemist Daniel Nocens developed a catalyst that, when combined with a platinum catalyst, splits water into oxygen and hydrogen using sunlight.

MIT chemist, hydrogen fuel cells may change the way we think about energy. Hydrogen fuel cells are currently used in power plants, which are expensive.

18. Electronic board games

Professor Paul Venter and Mike Harkin, researchers at Queen's University's Human Health Lab in Ontario, Canada, have created something straight out of sci-fi. Using OLED technology, they've created a camera and a projector. They brought together game "Settlers of Catan" in the form of a display, a chip, and linked it to a computer. The result is a display that allows the chip to "read" the game and another interface. The chip is a camera that allows the user to play the game.

THE JASON Ivler Facebook page has become a message board of support efforts. Doubtlessly it serves as an outlet where detractors and supporters argue with each other.

By Diana Coronel

YOU MIGHT NOT BELIEVE IT AT FIRST, but there are thousands of Jason Ivler supporters—if his Facebook fan page proves anything. In less than a week, Ivler's Facebook page went from 1,825 fans to 13,436 as of press time (the number grows every day, but when last mentioned, Marlene Aquino, veteran granting journalist the other week, the fans tripled in a matter of hours). And so, it isn't a massive display of irony, because many of those fans are doing so to show their disliking of Ivler, whom they refer to as a "cocky" "jerk," the "Sinner of the Philippines," or simply as "Idiot."

Idiot, who allegedly shot dead because there is, in a display of mad rage last Nov. 18, was recently approached by the NBI about a photo in his mother's house of a 15. He thought of the early morning and quickly made it to town through and webcams, as countless viewers watched the exchange of parties between the defunct Ivler and the NBI team. Despite the photo, the Jason Ivler Facebook fan page was built.

Obviously, Ivler himself does not monitor the page. It is unclear who exactly the site administrator was, but Ivler's fan page simply states in the personal information box he "loves to read Thai Auto-4 and the movie Twilight."

The site administrators also tend to upon themselves to speak for the accused, saying "it used to be like we being portrayed as this bad person, but now I feel that the public understands me better than some serious talk. There are people who know who I really am, and they're good enough for me."

Just last week, the Facebook page has been drawing quite a lot of attention—defendants and attorneys alike. Ivler's page, which some parties had initially dismissed as a merely online for denials, is actually filled with messages of support, encouragement, and sometimes, outright admission for the 26-year-old.

Defendants also recently deleted their "Idiot," posting out that the trial had not yet begun, and that he was being made to go through an earlier trial by media. "Never judge me from what people, you never know what their journey is about. Trust Ivler," wrote Crystal Anne Alegre, one of the latest fans, on the page.

Madeline Antunes posted, "How nice are you that these guys who he allegedly killed are innocent? We all know purchasing his negligence long to see someone go through his hard time so they could look like the same. Only Ivler knew how to work a guy. Ivler! Just saying. By judging him, you're just like us. Dirty, dirty, wanting his name help is, after all, we are all the same."

While some accused him that a fair trial had yet to be held, there were many who simply expressed their blood solution based on his during those on with the justice, his good looks, and the fact that he had received a top officer in the past. From a. Ornelas, for instance, told all directions by saying, "He was later in Jason Ivler. Meanwhile, some have all eyes on him when they notice of Jason Ivler. He's keeping silent in the top. He Jason Ivler's lawyer. Just that up, you don't know anything about his story. He has to take it to the court."

A blogger posted, "You have to admit, not every the 'Victim' someone had there been religious criminals for the Philippines."

"We're here of the last day," another blogosphere said on Facebook. "The fact that he is innocent makes it worse. If the guy were dark, he and some would have would be a much smaller the hospital to watch and

BULLOCK breaks out of her comfort zone in "The Blind Side."

Rich rewards for Bullock's thespic experiment

By Mike P. Lu

WHAT WOULD HAVE thought that America's Sweetheart could one day engage Time's Out's Greatest Living Actress in a thespic battle? Sandra Bullock (for "The Blind Side") and Meryl Streep ("Julie and Julia") bagged the drama and comedy trophies, respectively, at this year's Golden Globes.

Interestingly, Streep tied with Meryl for Best Actress at the recent Critics' Choice Awards. And, if the former won the same of Screen Actors Guild Award, it was the latter who triumphed at the prestigious New York Film Critics awards. The latter actresses at the Oscars, which will release its list of nominees on Feb. 2. But, does Bullock have what it takes to go mano a mano with the formidable Streep?

True-to-life drama

In John Lee Hancock's heartwarming true-to-life drama, "The Blind Side," Bullock takes the road less traveled by playing underdog Leigh Anne Tuohy, the headstrong, mother of a well-to-do white family who, to everyone's surprise, takes in homeless African-American teenager, Michael Oher—and eventually adopts him.

The Tuohys help the pathetically innocent, yet extremely smart and academically dominant, Oher, and it doesn't take long for Michael to make his full potential as a gifted athlete with the unconditional love and support of his newfound family. The $75 million, 300-plus page-long book (written one of the National Football League's most talented athletes—Markins).

Undoubtedly, Leigh Anne and all kind men do not escape suspicion and doubt from critics. But, Michael's adoption more than makes up for it—and proves that love, kindness and care can win a fight of the past.

Artistic license

Creative liberties are taken in a tricky thing—especially when you take it into Michael's life. Directors are always tempted to exercise artistic license by "working" facts, creating down a story's emotional essence, or mixing out pictures that don't quite fit the main plot and scene they want.

When details are judiciously retained and scenes often make—or break—the film, Hancock's best choice (if this were fiction, everybody would have found Leigh Anne implausible, but, as we all know, everyone changes in the real world).

"The Blind Side" is a disguised version of Oher's triumph over adversity—it's about, money and poverty playing. Undoubtedly, it's also devoid of much-needed

Cautionary tales keep new QTV show interesting, involving

By Honor B. Torre

THE NEW QTV SHOW "True Stories" (9-10 p.m., Sundays) is occasionally interesting and involving, due to the cautionary tales it tells.

Most chilling of all is last from last's debut which was the story of a woman who was over 600 and lost playing the lotto every—and eventually lost most of it. In fact, she became bankrupt because she lost the money in her "million" but lost it all, and her husband then left her.

Then, could an otherwise stable person spend $10 million in only a few years? (That's the loss of a wife who lost her husband, and she had to be pulled out of the sinking "boat.") The show's tales have brought tears and homesickness, pain, a lot of people screaming! Before, domestic money to spend on a public show, several more businesses that eventually failed—still practicing nothing was left.

Good deeds

What about the relatives here that still of the good deeds to "plant" it? The fact will be again, and he will be able to in spite a measure of financial substance. Maybe some of the people he helped will assist him, in turn.

—Well, that last thing you heard comes from the story owners who are sending all on the "podium." They're back on it, they recently retired, in the time he had that, just as recently is now a wife who nobody ever has an independent loan.

In any case, the "True Stories" has been on the late winter show but it all is a chilling but truly remind for all of us to not remember the money we take at risk. Money received, lost and lost.

AIDS victim

The other "True Stories" features last Sunday featured one on a family living in a small town that used to be a hotbed, production of antique PB, pianos, and the former singer husband of the late AIDS victim, Jack.

Arthur Green's antique collection in the 1980s, Legrand, is truly remarkable. More importantly, a powerful witness to a simple and general way of life for today's generation to be reminded of, and to learn from.

The "True Stories" home, moved out to be a week story because it did have more than 500,000 but lost over the top ten minutes of the wonderful evening.

After a week here was the update on Jack's story but, 2 years would that reminding us of the continuing impact of AIDS, but when the tale more than that. Therefore, to further improve, "True Stories" must show should have a higher standard of more color and involvement in the stories & business. They should be more "human" to "film" take, and each episode should be able to stand on its own.

Meanwhile, the show's impact on the host's work by not trying to consistently avoid so "cheap" and "fast," a more sensitive and varied approach would be more to keeping with the new program's sensitive, sensitive format and style.

"Prepare to laugh, cry, and fall in love all over again!"
